being entirely virtuous, with which

This story was false, and Hyrcanus was provoked against him, and all the Pharisees had very great indignation against him.

Now there was one Jonathan, a very great friend of Hyrcanus's, but of the sect of the Sadducees, whose actions were quite contrary to those of the Pharisees. He told Hyrcanus, that "Elder had cast such a reproach upon him according to the common sense of the people, that he feared that if this would be made manifest, if he would not ask the question, what punishment they thought this man deserved? for that he might depend upon it, that the reproach was not laid on him with their approbation, if it were for punishing him as he deserved." So that the Pharisees were so much affected with this, that they were bound, but that it did not seem right to punish reproaches with death. And indeed the Pharisees, even upon other occasions, were not apt to be severe in punishments. At this gentle sentence

Hyrcanus was very angry, and thought that this man reproached him by these words, and approved of it. He was this day a chief magistrate, and in consequence of his office, he was bound to leave the city of the Pharisees, and abolish the decrees they had imposed on the people, and to punish those that observed them. From this source arose that hatred which he and his sons met with from the multitude.

But when Hyrcanus had put an end to this sedition, he retired to his hospitable house, and continued the government of the best manner for thirty years, and then died; leaving behind him five sons. He was esteemed God worthy of the three greatest privileges, the government of his nation, the dignity of the high priesthood, a prophecy; for God was with him, and enabled him to know futurities; and he foretold this in particular, that as he had two eldest sons, and that the government should continue in the government of public affairs; from whose unhappy catastrophe it will be learned how very much they were inferior to their father's happiness.

PORTSMOUTH.

The twelfth missionary meeting of the Newport Convention was held in Mary's Church, South, at 8 p. m., on Monday, Oct. 3, 1894, at the residence of the Rev. Mr. May, the Semi-Centennial of St. Mary's Estate. Two large drags carried the visiting choir from New York, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. John's, together with the attending clergy. The choir resided in St. Mary's Parsonage and marched thence through the grounds to the beautiful church, which was brilliantly lighted and packed with worshippers. The beauty of the flower and foliage decorations indicated the taste and either side.

The processional and recessional hymns were taken from the Festival Book of the Church of Christ. Mr. Henry P. Girard presided at the organ, and the office was without the assistance of a conductor by a total of 60 voices. The Colored and Offertory anthems were sung with a notable effectiveness, while Mr. S. Whitney's setting of hymn 507, "Son of God goes forth to war," illuminated the acoustic properties which may be expected in every church of like proportions—long, high and relatively narrow.

The rector of the parish, the Rev. Herbert Patterson, preceded Short Evening; the Rev. Dr. E. N. R. president of Hobart College, read the lesson. The Rev. Dr. C. J. Gilliat of St. George's, New York, gave a sermon from Luke 13 about the "signs and wonders" of the "evangelization of the Trust Estate and the early history of the Trust Society." Edward L. Buckley of St. John's, New York, sang the concluding hymn and pronounced the benediction. The rector used the Special Collection with the Special Thanksgiving commemorative of Bishops, Priests, Founders and Benefactors, which is contained in the Commemorative of the Cathedral Church of the Holy Virgin Mary, of Salisbury, England (Dedications of American Churches).

One could have wished that the plentiful rain which was falling at the end of the service might have been delayed for a couple of hours, but this was not allowed to postpone the festivities planned for the parish where St. Mary's and Holy Cross are located, the station and entrance.

There are several ways to run a newspaper, but I must say the best way is told in the following: A western editor once invited correspondence as to the best way to conduct his paper, and the man who hit the nail squarely on the head, replied anonymously, on a postal card: "Run it as you d-d please."—Penny's Abolition.

Habits of the Fur Seal.

The fur seal (its name should be furry seal) is the most celebrated of all our furbearers, and the United States Government has been as active in protecting it from destruction as it was in different to the fate of the buffalo millions. If our great international dispute with England and Canada over the fur seal had arisen seventy years ago, before the days of peaceful arbitration, there would surely have been a war over it. Nor is our interest in the fur seal to be wondered at when we consider that from 1870 to 1880 our national treasury received $3,000,000 from the Alaska Commercial Company as royalty on the animals killed (six-sevenths of the purchase price of Alaska). When to this we add the amount received in a 20 per cent. import duty on the dressed skins as they came back to us from the England and the total revenue derived from the fur seal in twenty years amounts to the enormous sum of $8,500,000. Such an animal was worth saving from destruction. No other quadruped ever became such a bone of contention between the great nations for a long period, the discussion winding up with a high and mighty conference of arbitration.

As usual, the whole trouble arose through the greediness of a few irresponsible and lawless individuals. The sealers of the Pacific coast lusted upon taking fur seals by shooting them in the open sea, by which wasteful process seven were lost for every three secured. But if it were not for the loss of money revenue derived from this animal, it is quite certain the government would have allowed the wasteful slaughter to go on until the last seal was dead.

The fur seal is not a true seal by any means, but a sea lion, with naked, paddle-shaped flippers and tiny ears. It is about two-thirds the size of the Zoroastrian, and is therefore the smallest member of the sealion family. Mr. Elliott gives the average length of the full-grown male animal as six feet from nose to tail, and weight from 350 to 500 pounds. The average length of the adult female is a trifle over four feet, and weight from 100 to 150 pounds. When dry, the coat of the seal is a light-brown fur, in which lies all the value of the skin. In preparing the pelt, the coarse outer hair is entirely removed, and the underlying fur is dyed a shiny, lustrous black, and sheared down very evenly. For some mysterious reason, we, the people of "Yankee ingenuity," are naturally unable to dye seal fur successfully, and this work is from sheer necessity sent to England. When it comes back, there is a high rate of duty to pay, which in addition to the original royalty of $10.22 paid to the government by the North American Commercial Company for every skin taken, the very long bill of transportation charges, labor, and profit, adds to the price of from $250 to $300 a seal-skin cloak.

In its habits the Fur Seal is a remarkable creature. With 3,000 miles of coast land upon which it chooses, this strange and voracious animal never refuses to sit still upon any portion of the whole North American continent, island or mainland, save the two little dots of land in Behring Sea, St. Paul, and St. George Islands, and the world collectively as a whole. It is found in great numbers, from the coast of St. George's only five and a half by three.

And yet, when Mr. Elliott made his careful and elaborate surveys of all the "rookeries," or breeding grounds on those islands, in July, 1873, and laboriously calculated the number of their fin-footed inhabitants, he found there the astonishing number of 3,189,420 fur seals. Like sheep in a field, they stolidly crowded one another on the sloping shores of sand, or water-worn boulders, or tables of slaty-blue basalt. Each burly old male appears a giant beside the females and young males gathered around him.—[W. T. Hornaday in St. Nicholas for October.

Sentiment.

"What's the matter with you, anyhow?" said Meandering Mike. "You act like you're going to cry."

"I don't," replied Plodding Pete.

"Maybe I am. I've been thinking up my wasted life, and I'm homesick."

"Homesick? Well, I don't know but what it's natural. You go to the land and that way makes you homesick."

"You're inside a jail for more'n six months!"—[Washington Star.

"I offered Burrow $5 to do a job for me yesterday, but he said he wouldn't touch it for less than $10."

"That's Burrow's way. He never touches me for less than $10."—[New York Press.

INCIDENT OF A WEDDING TRIP.

The Newly Married Husband Thought of His Wife Just In Time.

The wife of a well-known New York, says the New York Tribune, told about an incident of her wedding trip the other evening, as illustrating the forgetfulness of a man who has only recently abandoned selfish bachelorhood. They had only just begun their bridal journey. "On that afternoon the train left the track and began to bump along the ties. I happened at that moment that the newly-made husband was walking down the side of the car away from the seat where his bride sat, and he was so terrified at having the train leave the track there, for they were on a bend on a steep and lofty embankment. With a thought of nothing but the peril which threatened the train, he dashed madly for the door. He was on the platform, already ear-reading and yawning, and in another instant he would have leaped, when, unconsciously looking back at the danger he was leaving, he saw his wife. Instantly he turned and dashed back into the car. He was just in the nick of time to reach his wife, for already the car was tottering.

"Hold on for your life!" he cried to her. "We are going headlong over the bend."

He had fallen in the aisle at her side, and clinging to the seat he held his wife.

"Hold on for your life!" he cried again. "For we are going over!"

And they did go over, several times, and though the bridal couple were cut and bruised terribly, they were more fortunate than many others, for the death list after that wreck was a long one.

"But my husband," she said in telling the story, "could not seem to forgive himself for having forgotten me for a second, while I could understand it perfectly. He wasn't used to looking after a wife, and if you want to know the truth," she added with a smile, "I was glad that it all happened as it did, for I don't believe that any man who would desert his wife, but it takes a brave man who has got out of danger to go deliberately back into it. He knew that danger better than any one else in the car, I suppose, and he must have felt that we were both over. Yet he came back to me, and that was how I learned, on our wedding day, that my husband, if he was forgetful, was also brave."

Wanted Full Treatment.

A man came into an up-town barber shop, the other afternoon, says the Buffalo Express. He was untidy and his hair looked sleepy. The barber looked at the first vacant chair, and closed his eyes. The barber started to put a towel around his neck, and found that he was fast asleep. The barber punched him up, and said: "Shave, sir?"

"Yeah," replied the man in the chair, thickly. Then he closed his eyes, and went to sleep again.

The barber finished him and shaved him, going over his face three times, and applying hot towels. Then he caught the sleeper by the collar, jerked him up in the chair, and ran his hands through his disheveled hair. After repeated punchings, the man opened his eyes a bit.

"Hair cut, sir?" asked the barber.

"Yeah," replied the man in the chair as his head dropped forward on his breast.

The barber cut his hair. After that operation was gone through with, he awakened his customer again, and said: "Better let me singe it, sir; it's getting rather thin on top. Tonic would do it good, too."

"All right," responded the man in the chair, relapsing into his trance.

In twenty minutes the singeing and the stimulating had been done. Then the barber said: "Want your moustache shaved, sir?"

"Yeah," responded the man in the chair.

The moustache was trimmed and waxed. The man's face was carefully powdered, and all the other little attentions paid. Then the barber punched him up again, and said: "All right, sir."

"Out my hair," the man in the chair ordered, closing his eyes for another nap.

"It is out, sir."

"Gimme shampoo."

"You've had one."

The man in the chair sat up and blinked. "Nothin' more to do?" he asked, regretfully.

"No, sir, everything's done."

The customer stared vacantly at the looking-glass for a minute. Then he looked back in the chair again, and closed his eyes.

"Everything's all done," put in the barber.

"Rat!" said the man in the chair.

And he went to sleep before the barber could remonstrate.

HER COMMON REPLY:

"I DON'T FEEL VERY WELL."

You Hear These Words Every Day

Spoken By Women You Know.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

It's in their mind all the time.

It weighs upon them, it crushes them.

They are utterly miserable.

Don't you know the reason?

Don't you know that the cause of nearly all your troubles was discovered

by a woman twenty years ago?

Don't you know that from that day to this,

thousands have been cured of the same life-killing troubles that now afflict

you?

The words "Women's Complaints" represent misery untold, and have shortened

thousands of beautiful lives.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound comes to you with physical relief;

nothing like it ever came into the lives of women. It relieves at once, and cures all the ailments that result from displacement and derangement of the womb.

Hear what this woman who once suffered and is now well says. Can proof be greater?

"All I have to say is, any woman who continues to suffer with any of these trying diseases peculiar to our sex is largely responsible for her own suffering, for if she will only apply to Mrs. Pinkham, relief will follow at once. This I know absolutely from my own personal experience. Her Vegetable Compound is a miracle. I have seen it cure women who were troubled when all the best doctors failed.

"My sisters, don't hesitate.

Write at once; relief is waiting for you."—Mrs. JENNIE STEWART, San Francisco, Cal.

MODERN SURGERY.

The Large Part That Absolute Cleanliness

Plays in Its Operations.

There are three locations, so to speak,

the absolute cleanliness of which must be above suspicion before the operator is justified in proceeding to his work. These are the surgeon's hands, his instruments and the integument covering the part of the patient's body at which the operation is about to be performed.

How is the requisite cleanliness in each case secured? So far as the hands are concerned, by profuse scrubbing with a millbrush in soap and hot water, followed by a thorough drenching in some antiseptic solution, as that of 1 in 2,000 of peroxide of mercury. So far as the instruments are concerned, by sterilizing them—that is, by boiling them

in water, or by passing them through the flame of a spirit lamp, or placing them in a steam sterilizer, and then,

when the operator is ready to begin, by putting them into a receptacle containing an antiseptic solution—as, for example, that of carbolic acid. Lastly, so far as the patient's integument is concerned, by washing the part first thoroughly with soap and water, having previously shaved it, if necessary, and afterward with a peroxide of mercury

solution, or if the part be greasy,

by removing all the greasy material by
